NUTRITION GUIDE BY RICHLIFTS

PROTEIN

- Aim for 0.7–1g per pound of body weight per day.
Example: If you're 150 lbs → target 105–150g of protein daily.
- Sources: Easiest way is to have Whey Protein + Eggs + Chicken if possible
- Example :
 - 5–6 whole eggs = ~30–36g protein
 - 1–1.5 scoops of whey protein = ~25–35g protein
 - Total: ~55–70g protein
 - This already covers half (or more) of your daily protein if you're aiming for 100–140g per day (depending on your weight).

NOW THE BIG QUESTION - CUT/BULK/MAINGAIN?

- WATCH : <https://www.instagram.com/flaaaassshhhhh/reel/DCEWq4uSJEH/>

If you're underweight or can't gain size:

Start by eating 150–250 calories ABOVE maintenance.

- Maintenance means the calories your body needs to stay the same weight.
- If you're not gaining weight, you're not in a surplus — simple as that.

Example:

If your maintenance = 2200 kcal → Eat 2350–2450 kcal daily.

What If You're Fat or Chubby?

➤ Step 1: Get Lean First

If you're carrying too much fat, don't bulk yet. That's a recipe for disaster.

Start by reducing 300–500 calories from your maintenance level.

- This puts you in a calorie deficit = you lose fat.
- Combine this with high protein, resistance training, and daily steps/cardio.

Example:

If your maintenance is 2500 kcal → Eat around 2000–2200 kcal to lose fat.

What Next?

Once you're visibly lean (waist smaller, some arm & shoulder definition):

✂ Then choose:

- Maintain: If you're happy with your size and just want to stay lean & strong.
- Lean Bulk: If you want more size — eat in a slight surplus (150–200 kcal max) and gain slowly to avoid fat gain.
